Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Some Aims and Values in Domestic Art, Vol. 7: One of the New Subjects in Our School Curriculum The familiar proverb, There is nothing new under the sun, may be true from some points of view, but when we remember the schools as we knew them in the first years of our school life, when reading consisted of repeating the alphabet or of reading such inspiring stories as, Do we go up? We do go up. Do we go in? We do go in, when spelling began with a-b ab, e-b eb, i-b ib, o-b ob, when to draw a picture was an offense worthy of punishment, when the work in the upper grades was of this same abstract nature, when we compare such a school with the best schools of today we realize that there is something new in the schools at least. In fact, there is much in them that is new. Domestic Art is part of this new element. Its introduction into the schools of today, along with drawing, manual training, domestic science and the rest, is the result of new needs and ideals in the educational world, brought about largely by changes in the economic and social world. These changes have found expression along two distinct lines-an ever increasing demand for universal education, for equality of opportunity, and an ever growing belief in the principle of development through participation-learning through doing. Psychologists agree that a very much larger per cent of children and young people are concrete thinkers and persons of action than abstract thinkers. That is, a much larger per cent learn naturally by studying things, actually seeing and handling...
